IOCG Mineralisation Intersected at Emmie Bluff Deeps

Massive haematite breccia, probably in ex-Wandearah Fm siltstone. Elevated Ce/La confirmed by portable XRF

Interpreted Hiltaba granite, haematitised and chloritized, increasing chlorite alteration with depth. Significant K-feldspar and sericite alteration in patches

Strongly altered (haematite, chlorite, sericite dominant) 50m zone of intense copper sulphides, increasing with depth. Dominated by chalcopyrite in blebs and forming in line with remnant sedimentary structures. Bornite concentration increasing with depth.

Decreasing haematite and copper sulphides, increasing silica alteration

DD21EB0018

Intersect 200m of intense IOCG alteration including approx. 50m of copper sulphide mineralisation consisting of chalcocite, chalcopyrite and bornite zones

ALTERATION ASSEMBLAGE

Host-rock alteration assemblage encountered includes chlorite, baryte, sericite, and potassium feldspar, all typical of IOCG deposits in the region

XRF READINGS

Portable XRF readings have confirmed the presence of copper, as well as highly elevated levels of pathfinder elements such as La, Ce, Co and Mo

Logged massive haematite

Logged interbedded steely haematite and Wandearah Siltstone

Mineralised zone, 80m @ 0.4% Cu within a broader 105m zone of massive haematite. Logging indicated only trace chalcopyrite, no bornite. Interpreted to indicate substantially lower tenore mineralisation than appears to have been encountered in DD21EB0018
